AND COMMENTS FROM

SUBSCRIBERS

NOT JUST FOR KIDS

We recently subscribed to The Disney Channel as a surprise to our nine-year-old daughter Katie. My husband and I were the ones who were surprised when we realized we were enjoying the programs as much as Katie. Thanks for giving us programming that we can all watch and enjoy together as a family.

DISNEY INTERRUPTS THE DINNER HOUR

We have been subscribers to The Disney Channel for a year and a half. We have enjoyed it very much. But we are disappointed about the programming changes. It's difficult to watch movies that start at six o'clock in the evening. At six we are eating dinner. At seven we could sit down and enjoy a film.

Sylvia Williams
El Cajon, CA

Research conducted by The Disney Channel on scheduling showed that a significant number of subscribers picked 6:00 p.m. (5:00 Central) as the best time period for "family films." In addition, we felt that such family fare would serve as excellent introductions to our regular 8:00 (7:00 Central) p.m. prime time series, such as "Gallegher," "The Edison Twins," and, starting next month, "Five Mile Creek." Please refer to the "What's On" section to check when these family films will be repeated.

RAVE REVIEWS FOR BOB HOPE THEATRE

I can't thank The Disney Channel enough for presenting "Bob Hope Theatre." My children were only familiar with Mr. Hope's work through his TV specials. They really loved "Son of Paleface," and my wife and I were delighted to see Bob Hope with Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour in "The Road to Rio" and "The Road to Bali." Saturday night has become "Bob Hope Theatre Night"—and the kids really went crazy knowing that their favorite Hayley Mills movies would be followed by a Bob Hope classic. Keep up the good work, one and all.

CHANNEL MAGAZINE MORE CONVENIENT

I am so pleased with the new Disney magazine. The daily format is perfect. Thank you so much for putting in the names of the episodes for "Walt Disney Presents." I also missed not having the names of each Zorro episode on "Disney's Legends and Heroes." And now you're including them in the program listings. Wonderful!

It's great having the length of each movie published too! It's both practical and fun, especially anticipating your adding a short subject to the film!

"FIVE MILE CREEK" ENCORE

My wife, my son and I are all constant viewers of The Disney Channel, and every month we find something that suits our collective and individual tastes.

However we picked up The Disney Channel relatively late in the run of "Five Mile Creek." My wife would like to see the complete series from beginning to end. In addition, I enjoyed the historical and technical features of "The Disney Family Album" presentations on Disney animators, but only got to see the last few programs. Perhaps you would consider re-airing the beginning of these series?

Craig Poorbaugh
Coraopolis, PA

An encore presentation of "Five Mile Creek" in its entirety begins in September. If you turn to page 28 in the What's On section, you will also discover "The Cherokee Trail," an exclusive special that provided the inspiration for "Five Mile Creek." Your suggestion on "The Disney Family Album" has been passed along to our programming department.

WE'RE ALL EARS

The Disney Channel welcomes letters and pictures from viewers. Send materials for publication to The Disney Channel Subscriber Services, 4111 W. Alameda, Burbank, CA 91505. All submissions must include name and address of sender. Please include the name of your local cable operator on all correspondence. Letters may be edited for reasons of space or clarity. Dave Smith, archivist for The Walt Disney Company, answers questions and provides information about the studio's history and its productions.

The 36 figurines of characters from "Fantasia," made by Vernon Kilns, are highly prized collectibles.

Was there much collectible merchandise made at the time of the original release of "Fantasia"?

—M.S., Allentown, PA

When the film came out in 1940, merchandisers must have felt that it did not lend itself to merchandising, and you find almost none of it today. There were a number of different books, a theater program, and, notably, a collection of ceramic pieces made by Vernon Kilns. The collection consisted of 36 figurines of "Fantasia" characters, and several sets of dinnerware featuring designs adapted from the film. These Vernon Kilns pieces are eagerly sought after by collectors.

Incidentally, we are currently offering the book "Fantasia," about the making of the film, in the Disney Channel Minnie Mall. It was written by John Culhane and published in 1983.

Von Drake debuted September 24, 1961.

In the early 1920s Walt Disney made a few cartoons starring the character Alice, who was played by Virginia Davis (and later on by Margie Gay). Are these cartoons still around?

—N.R., York, ME

From 1923 to 1927, Walt Disney made 57 of the Alice Comedies as silent films, so it was quite an extensive series. Today, however, many of the films seem to be lost. Through diligent searching, we have been able to find prints of 30 of them, which we have in our collection. Several of them had been preserved by Virginia Davis herself.

Alice of the comedies is named after Lewis Carroll's Alice, but her escapades bear little resemblance to Carroll's "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland." Walt Disney's "Alice in Wonderland," based on the Lewis Carroll novel mentioned above, and its equally famed sequel "Through the Looking Glass," was released in 1951. (See page 34 for air dates.)

From 1923 to 1927, Walt Disney made 57 Alice Comedies as silent films.

Is there really a place named Portobello Road, such as was featured in "Bedknobs and Broomsticks"?

—G.G., Encino, CA

There sure is, and recently while I was on vacation in London, I hunted out Portobello Road for its famous weekly Saturday flea market. Perhaps there were once bargains and treasures galore, but today most dealers seem to know the value of their wares. I did find a 1938 Snow White card game, which we needed for the Archives, for £8, and there was a mint copy of the French edition of the "Pop-Up Mickey Mouse" book priced at £75.

I am a big fan of Ludwig Von Drake. When did he make his debut?

—R.J., Franklin, MA

Ludwig Von Drake was one of the first Disney characters to make his debut on television. He was created to host the first color TV show on "Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color." The episode was called "An Adventure in Color" and aired on September 24, 1961. The show also featured the TV debut of the immensely popular, "Donald in Mathmagic Land."

Disney Channel Trivia

- It was partly because Disney's film distributor in 1953 did not want to handle the distribution of "The Living Desert" (check listings for times) that Disney created its own distribution organization, Buena Vista. The film's enormous success may have been a surprise to others, but not to Walt Disney, who had great faith in it. I am sure he was still grinning when he stepped forward to accept the Oscar (for the year's best documentary feature) that was presented to him the following spring.
- Patrick McGoohan who is featured in "The Three Lives of Thomasina," showing on The Channel, is perhaps best known around Disney for his portrayal of "The Scarecrow of Romney Marsh." In recent years he appeared in "Baby... Secret of the Lost Legend," a Touchstone Films production.

recent newspaper article about the success of The Disney Channel had as its headline: "Disney Channel: A Mickey Mouse station it's not."

That's true. "Mickey Mouse" — sometimes used to mean insignificant or silly — does not describe The Disney Channel. But Mickey Mouse as a symbol of the family fun and the good entertainment tradition that The Disney Channel holds dear is accurate. And as the channel committed to bringing you the best in family entertainment, we're energetically building on that tradition.

Today The Disney Channel is the fastest growing pay-television service in the country. And to keep up that pace, we're expanding our programming, too, but without compromising our high standards for family television. We believe that watching The Disney Channel should be quality family time. We've made that is more able than ever to provide the very best programming for all ages. In the coming year, our shows will be a rich mix of children's fare; Disney classics; and superior new films, specials and series that bring the whole family together.

FAMILY TV

We schedule programs with families in mind: children's shows in the morning and afternoon; family shows during the evening. It all adds up to 19-1/2 hours of continuous high-quality viewing.

Over the past year, national newspapers and magazines have run story after story about the growing financial and creative success of the new management team at The Walt Disney Company, headed by Michael Eisner, the company's commitment to ourselves and to you.

Because of our growth, The Disney Channel chairman. We are fortunate to be able to use the company's tremendous new resources to pursue our ambitious goals. We are juggling many new projects in various stages of development and production, all of which will appear on The Disney Channel between now and next spring.

Although we're expanding our programming for the whole family, we're still keeping an eye on the kids. We are committed to top-quality children's entertainment — lively programs that have social value and are fun. In addition to The Disney Channel's ever-popular children's series and Disney cartoons, we'll be bringing new outstanding series to fill their viewing hours. These will be series like the critically acclaimed "The Wind in the Willows" and others designed to be educational as well as entertaining.

And children can enjoy a range of full-length feature films, including internationally renowned animated movies. "Heidi's Song" and "Dot and Keeto" are two fine animated children's films currently airing on The Channel. "Dot and Keeto" is the first of four "Dot" films to be shown on The Disney Channel. Produced in Australia, the "Dot" movies are a unique combination of animation against live-action backgrounds.

You'll also see "A Boy Named Charlie Brown" and "Snoopy Come Home" — animated features starring two of America's all-time favorite cartoon characters.

The Disney Channel's musical specials come in various rhythms and settings, but they have one thing in common—they are unique, high-quality programs that you can't find anywhere else. For example, Paul McCartney's whimsy and gift for song-writing produced "Rupert and the Frog Song," a tuneful animated adventure starring England's favorite cartoon character, Rupert the Bear.

"What A Day For A Day dream" is a concert with John Sebastian, a unique performer who was the leader of one of the 1960's most popular rock bands, The Lovin' Spoonful, and is now a leading composer and singer of children's songs.

He will perform before a live audience of parents and children, singing songs from his Lovin' Spoonful days, such as "Do You Believe in Magic?" as well as children's songs.

AFTER SCHOOL

Each afternoon, grade-school kids will be treated to an hour program of great entertainment ranging from music to comedy to drama. It's fun and it also provides important lessons about life. A primary element will be "Kids Incorporated," a sort of "Fame" for the slightly younger set. "Kids Incorporated" stars a group of dazzling young singers and dancers who perform all the songs kids want to hear. And in working together for the success of their rock 'n' roll band, they learn a lot about how to get along in the world. "Kids Incorporated" entertains with music, dance, light drama, and caring about one another.

The program also offers award-winning dramas, including "The Kids of DeGrassi Street," where real kids from a real neighborhood deal with real problems.

And there is more. Every weekday afternoon is an hour packed with high-quality entertainment.

Perhaps most exciting of all, we are creating two new Disney Channel series, one for preschoolers and one for pre-teens. A group of nationally recognized experts in education, child psychology, and television programming is working with The Disney Channel to make the series ones that everyone will point to as standards of excellence in combining education and entertainment. The preschool series should be ready by the beginning of the year.

Children's education also includes guidance about the world kids live in. The Disney Channel will include programming to help children grow better. The highly acclaimed "Too Smart for Strangers" showed children how to respond to strangers in a way that protected themselves. We'll provide similarly gentle but clear warnings on other important issues.

up a TV set the future in Boris.

Theme-park specials bring magic and new attractions, such as Michael Jackson in Captain EO.

A baseball diamond is the scene for Lucy's advice to Charlie in "A Boy Named Charlie Brown."

By popular demand, "Five Mile Creek" returns to The Disney Channel on Friday nights.

NO GENERATION GAP

Some programs that appeal to children are also loved by the whole family. The Charlie Brown and Snoopy movies, for example, are favorites of people of all ages. There will be many programs with that same broad appeal.

We will continue to schedule drama, adventure and comedy series in regular weekday evening time slots for family viewing. "The Edison Twins" and "Danger Bay" will continue Wednesday nights at 8:00 and 8:30 p.m. We've reconfirmed our commitment to these series by continuing to produce and air new episodes.

The lives of "Doc" Roberts and his two children are filled with adventure as they fight to protect animals and the environment in the Pacific Northwest. And here's news: The Edison Twins are going to college this fall. They'll soon be moving into an apartment right near campus.

By popular demand, "Five Mile Creek" will return to The Disney Channel every Friday night beginning in September. Set in the Australian gold country of the 1860s, this 39-part series, produced exclusively for The Disney Channel, is epic in scale, filled with action, adventure, love, and intrigue.

And on Tuesday nights we'll show other high-quality series. One of them — "Boone" — is set in the Fifties and filled with the era's rock 'n' roll music. The series is about the life of Boone, a singer who is trying to make his way to the top.

Also in the works are additional mini-series with the scope and intrigue of "Disney's Return to Treasure Island."

SITCOMS FOR THE DISNEY CHANNEL

Two sitcoms are in development, scheduled for debut around the first of the year, for which we all have high expectations. Michael Eisner is overseeing the projects. When he was president of Paramount Pictures, he was responsible for "Happy Days," "Family Ties," "Webster," and a number of others. He's committed to first-rate production qualities and just the right stars so these new series will be ones the whole family will enjoy week after week on The Disney Channel.

INTRIGUING SPECIALS

Specials bring extra dazzle to The Channel's lineup. While series bring us familiar characters in new situations, and movies offer a full-length drama, adventure, comedy, or musical, a special is just that: something unique. Only on The Disney Channel do you find specials featuring popular children's and family performers. And unusual variety shows, like Garrison Keillor's nostalgic "A Prairie Home Companion: Lake Wobegon Comes to Disney"; and the astonishing street performers of "The New Vaudevillians" (see page 10).

In October you'll get to participate in the weekend-long celebration of the 15th anniversary of Walt Disney World. Never before has The Disney Channel brought an event to you live, but for this grand occasion, we'll have camera crews there all weekend, bringing you all of the goings on, including parades and featured celebrity performers.

A special about the making of Walt Disney World captures the magic of the ongoing dream and the immense scope of planning in the past and for the future of the world's most popular vacation resort. And there are other Disneyland and Walt Disney World specials in the offing.

CLASSIC DISNEY

Theme-park glitter and fantasy is only a small part of the Disney magic. The Disney Channel brings you Disney movies from our fabulous library: recent box-office releases as well as the classic animated films, popular comedies, and the fascinating True-Life Adventure films. August and September bring you "Return to Oz" and "Alice in Wonderland." Coming soon after that is "Pinocchio," and you'll also see "Mary Poppins," "20,000 Leagues under the Sea," "The Journey of Natty Gann," and others. We have an extensive library of Disney feature films to draw from, in addition to the library's enormous collection of cartoons, shorts, and television shows.

DISNEY CHANNEL PREMIERE FILMS

And now we're creating a whole new generation of Disney television. We're increasing the number of films that are made just for The Disney Channel. And the variety is wide: live-action adventure; whimsical animation; slice-of-life situations. They're all "Disney Channel Premiere Films."

DISNEY CHANNEL DISCOVERIES

In addition, we're relentless in our search for the best family-oriented movies already made. "Disney Channel Discoveries" are the little treasures we've unearthed. They're high-quality family films with good stories the whole family will love. "The Beniker Gang" (starring Andrew McCarthy), which had its world television premiere on The Disney Channel in April, is such a film. "Brothers By Choice" (see page 35) is another.

Others coming up: "A Billion for Boris" (Lee Grant, Tim Kazurinsky) is about three kids who fix up a TV set, and find it broadcasts the future. "Charlie Smith and the Fritter Tree" is the true story of a 12-year-old boy sold into slavery in the 1850s and of the rest of his life up to his 134th birthday in 1974. There are many others, and they will all be shown exclusively on The Disney Channel.

"They don't make movies like they used to" is a statement that just isn't true. They do. We do. We're producing them ourselves. We're creating them in collaboration with other producers. We're helping to finance them. And we're finding high-quality movies that have already been made but are little known. You'll see them all on The Disney Channel.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE THEATER

We've also acquired the entire Twentieth Century Fox library of Shirley Temple films. Most of them were originally black and white and are currently being colorized for "The Shirley Temple Theater" on The Disney Channel. They are expected to be ready for their premiere presentations after the first of the year. We're delighted to present these 18 films made by the beloved little star.

The Disney Channel is programmed for family fun. Week in and week out, we bring you outstanding children's series; exclusive specials featuring music, well-known entertainers, and unique international events; mini-series and continuing prime-time series; and fine movies for the whole family to enjoy.

Television time is a time to be together, to enjoy high-quality programs and one another's company. Sometimes the room fills with laughter, other times silence falls and feelings are shared. Or there's a hush and held breath with the excitement of thrilling adventure. That's family entertainment on The Disney Channel. 🐶

THE NEW VAUDEVILLIANS

America's finest young comics, jugglers, and mimes bring their talents to The Disney Channel

Vaudeville — the word conjures up images of a bygone era. One thinks of The Jazz Age, of Ziegfeld's Follies, of great names like James Cagney, Bob Hope, Groucho Marx and W.C. Fields. They were magical performers who became show business legends, and they all mastered their art on the vaudeville stage. Now an entire new generation of brilliant mimes, comics, jugglers and clowns have revived the art of vaudeville. And these gifted young artists will take center stage on The Disney Channel on Saturday, August 16, with the premiere of "The New Vaudevillians."

This 90-minute special, made exclusively for The Channel, was taped before live audiences during the San Francisco New Vaudeville Festival. Hosted by Peter Scolari, a co-star of CBS's series "Newhart," the program showcases a wealth of young talent whose skills will delight, amuse, and amaze audiences of all ages. "The New Vaudevillians" is a unique evening of entertainment that offers a look at the potential show business legends of tomorrow.

The scene is set by host Peter Scolari. On a stage surrounded by old steamer trunks, the very symbol of the old vaudeville star, Scolari recounts the golden days of a bygone era, when vaudevillians toured the nation playing to enthusiastic crowds in every major city. As a former juggler, Scolari also possesses a unique perspective on the new vaudeville, a movement which began in the 1960s among street performers who specialized in mime, clown routines, acrobatics and juggling.

All the color and laughter of this new variety art are captured in "The New Vaudevillians" with its antic buffoons, sad-eyed clowns, aerialists, brass bands, jugglers, ventriloquists and puppeteers. They're performers from all across the country. Some have already won acclaim, others are stars in the making.

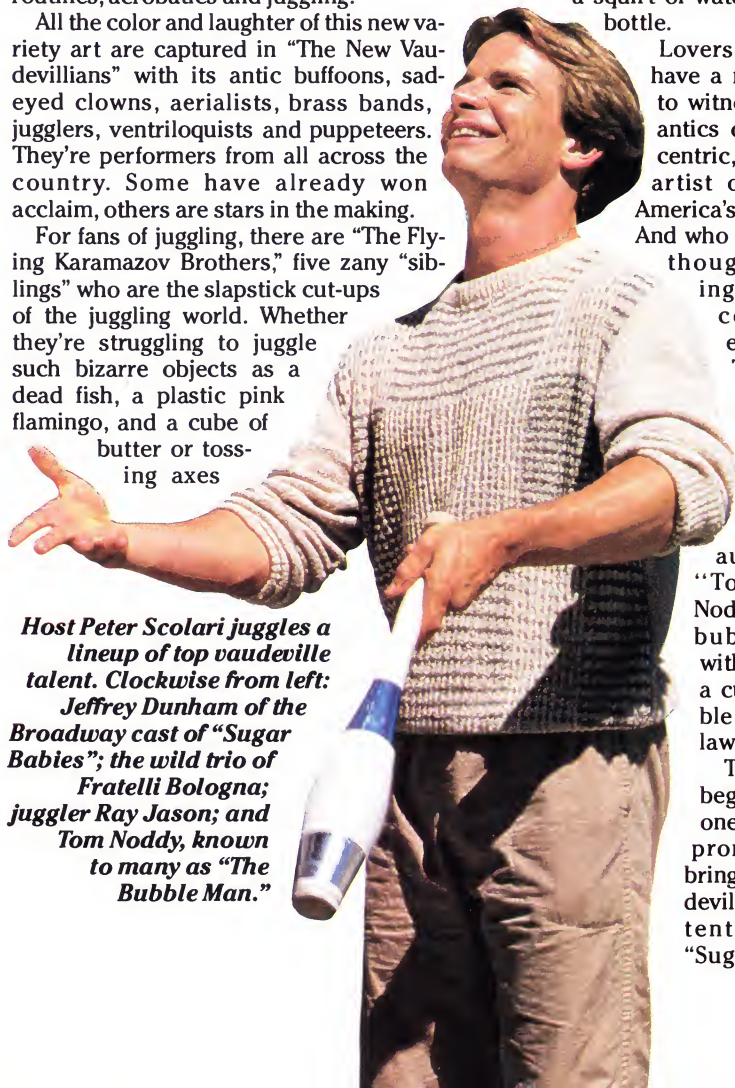

For fans of juggling, there are "The Flying Karamazov Brothers," five zany "siblings" who are the slapstick cut-ups of the juggling world. Whether they're struggling to juggle such bizarre objects as a dead fish, a plastic pink flamingo, and a cube of butter or tossing axes and torches about, The Karamazovs will try anything—including a pie in the face or a squirt of water from a seltzer bottle.

Lovers of clowns will have a rare opportunity to witness the sad-eyed antics of Avner the Eccentric, a brilliant young artist often touted as America's premiere clown. And who would have ever thought that blowing soap bubbles could pass for entertainment? Tom Noddy for one, and his beautiful creations have, in the past, astonished Johnny Carson and the audience of the "Tonight Show." Noddy creates giant bubbles, bubbles within bubbles, even a cube-shaped bubble that defies the law of physics.

Though it first began in the 1960s, one event played a prominent part in bringing the new vaudeville to national attention. That was "Sugar Babies," the long-running musical that was not only a Broadway hit but also drew wildly enthusiastic audiences when it toured around the country. This rollicking revival of vaudeville's golden days provided a perfect forum for many of the new vaudevillians. And four of them, introduced by Mickey Rooney, the star of "Sugar Babies," are on hand to showcase their creative talent.

Michael Davis is surely a candidate for the world's funniest juggler. Not only did Davis appear in the New York cast of "Sugar Babies" but he has also performed live in Washington, D.C., before President and Mrs. Reagan. He's joined onstage by Ronn Lucas, a brilliant young ventriloquist, Frank Olivier, a juggler who rides on a unicycle, wearing a tutu, and Jeffrey Dunham. They're the best and the brightest of a new generation.

Vaudeville in its golden age reigned supreme as the most popular form of American entertainment. It was the training ground for the great legends of show business. While the training ground for the new vaudeville performers has been street theater, it's honed their skills to a razor's edge. This new generation has built a reputation and reshaped all concepts of entertainment. Now, with the exclusive premiere of "The New Vaudevillians," subscribers to The Disney Channel can see these new stars, new legends in the making. It's 90 minutes of truly unique entertainment, a special program that reveals America's new generation of performing artists. ♡

RETURN TO OZ

FROM
THE EMERALD CITY
TO THE NOME
KING'S MOUNTAIN,
L. FRANK BAUM'S
IS FAITHFULLY
BROUGHT TO LIFE
BY THE MAGIC OF DISNEY.

Nearly a century ago a some-time Shakespearean actor named L. Frank Baum turned to writing to amuse his two young sons. Over the next two decades, Baum was to write 14 novels about the land of Oz and its Emerald City. And on August 31, subscribers to The Disney Channel can view the exclusive premiere of Walt Disney Pictures' "Return to Oz," considered the most faithful film adaptation of Baum's work ever made.

"Return to Oz" is the culmination of a long-standing ambition. Walt Disney had expressed an interest in the Oz books as far back as 1937, two years before MGM's musical production of "The Wizard of Oz." Unsuccessful in acquiring rights to that particular novel, Disney did purchase 12 of the 14 Oz stories in the late '50s. "Return to Oz," which is neither a sequel nor a musical, combines two of those later tales, "The Land of Oz" and "Ozma of Oz."

While many critics attacked the film on its release, their views were based on a comparison between the MGM musical and the Disney movie. Only Rex Reed and Mike Clark (whose review appeared in "U.S.A. Today") gave their unqualified approval. But Sheila Benson of "The Los Angeles Times" noted that the film not only paralleled L. Frank Baum's scary, fantasy storylines, but the books' original illustrations as well. And Aljean Harmetz, writer of the authoritative "The Making of The Wizard of Oz," observed that "Return to Oz" was closer to Baum's original stories in tone and intention.

The film features then 10-year-old Fairuza Balk as Dorothy Gale, and begins after Dorothy's return to Kansas. Obsessed with dreams of Oz, she's become pale and wan. A distressed Auntie Em decides on a drastic cure for her: she takes Dorothy to the clinic of an electric healer (Nicol Williamson) and his sinister nurse (Jean Marsh). Before she can undergo the horrifying "treatment," Dorothy escapes with the aid of a mysterious girl. Caught up in a giant thunderstorm and flood, Dorothy is swept away, and when she awakens, she discovers herself once more in the fabled Oz. (Please note that some scenes in this fantasy-adventure film may be too frightening for young children, and "Return to Oz" will air only after 6:00 p.m. EDT/PDT.)

In Oz she begins a wondrous—and harrowing—set of adventures. For rather than a saccharine fairy tale, "Return to Oz" is a fantasy-adventure. And as with Baum's original tales, it contains not only enchanting creatures, but malevolent and terrifying villains as well. Dorothy finds herself pitted against two of Baum's greatest evil-doers, the Princess Mombi and her leader, the Nome King who, in his quest to become human instead of rock, has laid waste to Oz.

Accompanying Dorothy as she sets about restoring Oz to its former grandeur are a new set of companions: Billina, a talking hen, Tik Tok, Oz's mechanical soldier, Jack Pumpkinhead, and The Gump, a marvelous beast.

"Return to Oz," which was nominated for an Academy Award for Will Vinton's amazing "claymation" sequences with the Nome King, is a rare movie event. Not since L. Frank Baum himself first attempted to adapt his work for the screen back in 1914 has a writer's intent and vision been so ably followed. While some may unfavorably compare "Return to Oz" to earlier films, it is best to compare the movie with Baum's novels, which reveal it to be a first-rate, and faithful, film fantasy.

FLIGHT OF THE NAVIGATOR

As David Freeman, 12-year-old Joey Cramer blasts off for the stars in this action-adventure thriller.

A boy vanishes for eight years — and returns home without having aged a day. At the same time a mysterious alien spaceship appears, a craft that baffles NASA's finest scientific brains. How — and why — are a small boy and a spaceship from another world related? The answers to that mind-boggling mystery form the crux of "Flight of the Navigator," an action-adventure thriller to be released by Walt Disney Pictures this August 1.

The movie (starring Joey Cramer in the role of David Freeman) begins on the day in 1978 when David disappears without a trace. He miraculously returns to his bewildered family in 1986, but he not only hasn't aged he also can't recall a single memory of the intervening years.

Naturally his parents are shocked and

"The pilot of this ship is a robot named Max," Joey Cramer explains.

bewildered, doctors are puzzled, and within hours of his homecoming David Freeman is being put under a microscope. A panel of NASA scientists are soon convinced the lad has some strange connection with the extraordinary spacecraft that has also suddenly appeared. They're right — but not even Dr. Farraday (played by Howard Hesseman of "Police Academy II") and "WKRP in Cincinnati") suspects just how close that relationship is.

"It's a super exciting part," young Joey Cramer said when "The Disney Channel Magazine" interviewed the star between takes of the film's final scenes, which were being shot on a striking futuristic set at the historic Charlie Chaplin studio.

"The pilot of this strange spaceship is a robot named Max," Cramer explains. "It turns out that I'm his navigator. We get into some pretty fantastic adventures that become a race against time."

In addition to some of the most revolutionary special effects yet seen on the screen, "Flight of the Navigator" boasts some diverse locales.

"I've been on this picture for over six months," Joey adds. "We started filming on locations in Florida, such as Fort Lauderdale and Miami. Then we went to Norway for a month. Now we're finishing the film in Hollywood."

In addition to Joey Cramer and Howard Hesseman, the film also stars Cliff De Young and Veronica Cartwright, who play David Freeman's distressed parents, and Sarah Jessica Parker as a NASA technician who sympathizes with David Freeman.

The scorching pace and stunning cinematic scope of "Flight of the Navigator" are the work of Randal Kleiser, a brilliant director whose previous hits include "Grease" and "The Blue Lagoon."

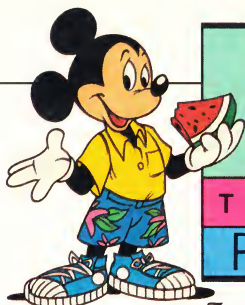

(The screenplay was written by Michael Burton and Matt MacManus; it was based on a story by Mark H. Baker.) Kleiser quickly foresaw that, in addition to a film that combines heart-warming relationships with high adventure, "Flight of the

"I saw the chance to explore computer graphics techniques that would create a new sense of realism," says director Randal Kleiser.

Navigator" would require the most revolutionary special effects to bring the film to life.

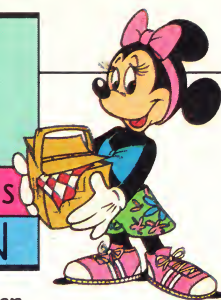

"I had been looking for an opportunity to work with special effects," Kleiser explained. "As I read the script for 'Flight of the Navigator,' I saw the chance to explore computer graphics techniques that would create a new sense of realism that surpasses many of the images we've seen in movies before."

The realism of the revolutionary special effects combine with the film's sense of adventure, suspense, and human warmth to make "Flight of the Navigator" a stylish and atmospheric thriller. It's a heady brew that makes "Flight of the Navigator" a sure-fire candidate to be this summer's stellar entertainment. 🐻

Little Flower

A little seedling sitting here,
It's very pleasant to lie near,
To watch it sprout into a bud,
From all that yucky slime and mud.
Purple, yellow, green, or blue,
It doesn't matter to me or you.
It's sprouting up and growing tall,
Can you believe it was so small?
Growing, growing in the sun;
Up it shoots, it's having fun,
It blossoms into a flower there,
Without a single want or care.

A Poem in Your Pocket

Keep a poem in your pocket and a picture in your head and you'll never feel lonely at night

The little poem will sing to you the little picture bring to you

Moochie

I'm wondering how many Walt Disney movies Moochie starred in? How old was he in his first one?

Loree Jone, Age 10
Melbourne, AR

It's necessary to distinguish between the character Moochie and Kevin Corcoran, who played the role, and thus took on the nickname Moochie.

Kevin Corcoran first played Moochie when he was seven years old in "Adventure in Dairyland," a serial on The Mickey Mouse Club. Moochie was so popular that the name stuck, and Walt Disney had the role of Moochie written into another serial, "The Further Adventures of Spin and Marty." Moochie was featured in two television mini-series—"Moochie of the Little League" and "Moochie of Pop Warner Football." The character Moochie also appeared in the Disney movie "The Shaggy Dog."

But, Kevin Corcoran also appeared in many Disney and TV shows that did not include Moochie.

Night

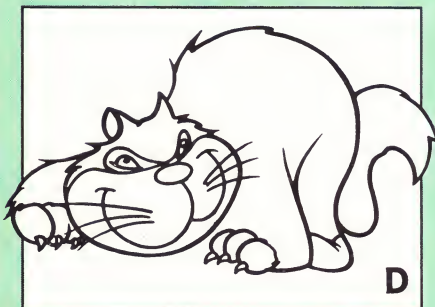

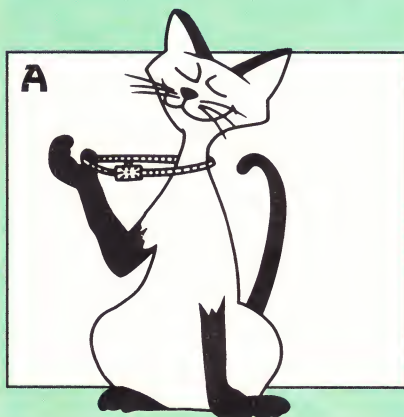

My kitten walks on velvet feet
And makes no sound at all;
And in the doorway nightly sits
To watch the darkness fall.

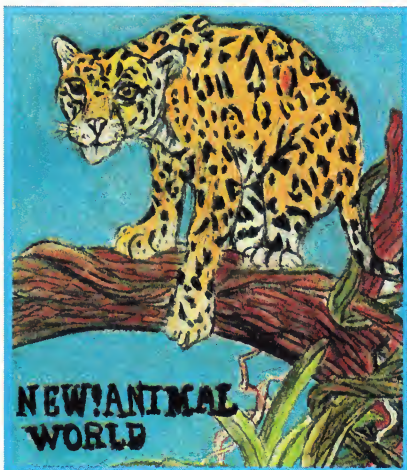

I think he loves the lady, Night,
And feels akin to her,
Whose footsteps are as still as his,
Whose touch as soft as fur.

Thinking

Silently
Inside my head
Behind my eyes
A thought begins to grow and be

Where I keep things.

Find It In the Library

Good movies are frequently made from stories that were originally good books, but this summer's selection is exceptional. We're showing three movies that were made from three of the very best children's books ever written.

Alice in Wonderland combines characters and episodes from Lewis Carroll's two books "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" (1865) and "Through the Looking Glass" (1871).

He entertained his friends' children with his amusing, whimsical stories, and the tales have delighted children for generations since.

Heidi's Song is based on the book "Heidi," written by Johanna Spyri in 1880. When Mrs. Spyri was a toddler, her father nicknamed her Hanni, and it is said that there are many similarities between young Hanni and good-natured, joyful Heidi.

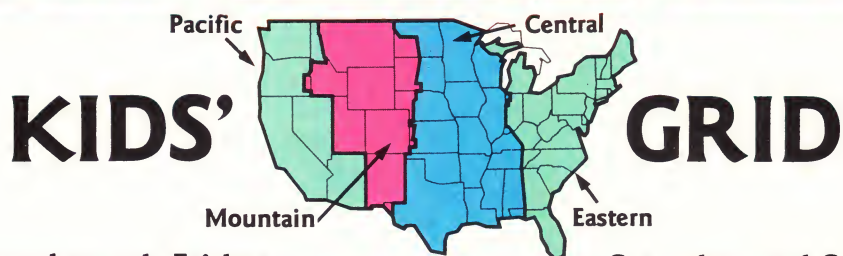

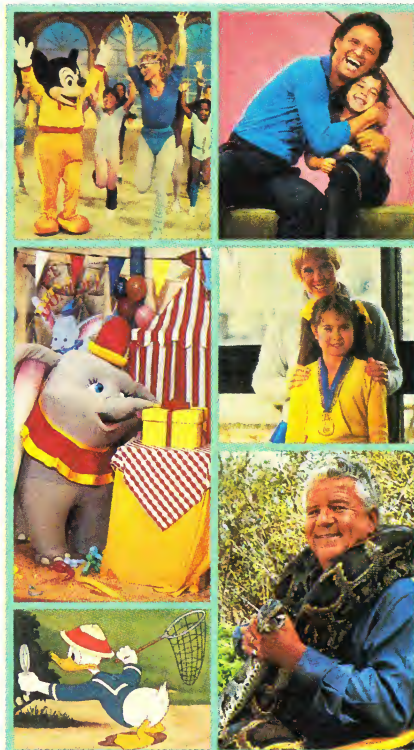

Return to Oz is based on two books by L. Frank Baum: "The Land of Oz" (1904) and "Ozma of Oz" (1906). They are said to be his two favorites of the 14 "Oz" books he wrote. Like many other fairy tales, his stories of imagination include the wicked as well as the good.

PROGRAMMING Just for Kids

KIDS' PIX

"Heidi's Song" and "Alice in Wonderland"—two of our Kids' Pix—are stories that are well-known, but you may not know about Dot.

Dot and Keeto is the first of four Dot movies to be shown over the next few months. In this one, Dot shrinks to the size of a bug and, with Keeto the mosquito, explores the insect world.

Little Leading Ladies

and Their Dreams

Things imaginary often seem real. Our dreams, for instance, are sometimes as vividly real as what we see when we are awake. Three full-length animated movies on The Disney Channel—"Alice in Wonderland," "Dot and Keeto," and "Heidi's Song"—tell of the dreams of their three little leading ladies. Wondrous animation takes you to faraway worlds. Alice, Dot, and Heidi may be little in size, but they have big imaginations.

While Alice lies in the grass, drowsy with the summer heat and bored with the history lesson her older sister is reading her, she imagines a white rabbit scurrying by. Her mind drifts off in a dream in which she chases the rabbit right down the rabbit hole, landing in a room with a small door and a talking doorknob.

The doorknob tells her that by drinking from a bottle on the table she will grow small enough to fit through the door. She eats a cookie first and grows big. Then with a drink, she shrinks so small that she fits into the bottle and rides on a sea of her own tears, right through the keyhole and into Wonderland.

There, she encounters very strange creatures and wild adventures.

When she enters the rabbit's house and eats a cookie, she grows so huge she pushes up the roof and breaks down the walls. Farther on, she meets talking flowers that stand taller than she does. (They think she's a weed.) She meets a caterpillar who blows smoky vowels in her face: Aaaaaa! Oooooo! And the Cheshire Cat introduces her to the Mad Hatter and March Hare, who invite her to a crazy mixed up "unbirthday" party.

In "Dot and Keeto," Dot starts out a real little girl, playing in her garden. Then she imagines that she eats a red root, which makes her change size, just like Alice did. First she grows huge and then very small. She enters a world of insects, in which even the red ants are bigger than she.

She's frightened in this unknown world, but Keeto the mosquito guides her in search of the bark of a tree she must eat to again become normal size. Along the way, she meets funny creatures: Butterwalk, the friendly old caterpillar, the Very Reverend Atlantis Pedantis, the praying mantis, Sergeant Formica, leader of the ant platoon, and Big Daddy spider.

These buggy friends are animated, but many of the insects in the film are real. The movie makers filmed both. The real ones sometimes look imaginary and the animated ones at times seem real.

Heidi in "Heidi's Song" doesn't change size or travel underground, but she dreams of a beautiful world of joy and goodness, and believes in her dreams. Her happy spirit melts even the cold heart of her gruff old grandfather.

Heidi lives in the beautiful Swiss Alps—snow-capped mountains with valleys of goat pastures and bright-colored wild flowers. During the day she plays in the grass with the goats. She's a barefoot country girl, carefree and joyful. And when asleep, her dreams are filled with make-believe creatures every bit as fantastic as Alice's and Dot's.

Animation creates worlds maybe even you haven't dreamed of. So let your mind run along with Alice on her underground rabbit chase; journey with Dot among the insects; and visit Heidi's land of mountain beauty. There are so many worlds beyond our own.

LITTLE LEADING LADIES

In August and September The Disney Channel presents a special offering of four animated and live-action films that feature a quartet of young heroines, whom we affectionately call our "Little Leading Ladies." The program begins on August 16 with the exclusive premiere of "Heidi's Song," Hanna-Barbera's animated version of Johanna Spyri's tale of the little Swiss girl. On Saturday, August 30, join Alice and the Mad Hatter in Disney's timeless classic, "Alice in Wonderland." On the following evening, August 31, it's the world television premiere of Disney's "Return to Oz." It's the most faithful film version ever made of L. Frank Baum's Oz novels. And on September 12 comes the exclusive premiere of "Dot and Keeto," an animated film from Australia—and the first of four Dot films that we'll be presenting on The Disney Channel.

World Wildlife Fund announces an original work of art in hand-painted porcelain.

Hi There!

Newest work in the distinguished series of baby animal sculptures in porcelain from the World Wildlife Fund.

Art of fascination and charm at the attractive price of $45.

The World Wildlife Fund has undertaken the creation of a delightful collection of porcelain sculptures of baby animals.

Hi There! portraying a charming little panda, has just been completed for this collection. It is crafted in fine porcelain—entirely hand-painted—and is being issued at the modest price of $45, which itself is payable in convenient monthly installments of $15 each.

This new and original work of art has been designed exclusively for the World Wildlife Fund by Eva Dalberg, one of the world's most gifted portraitists of animals. Dalberg was chosen for this commission because of her very special ability to capture in art the charm and affectionate quality of baby animals.

Here, the little panda is portrayed in an amusing situation—eyeing a tiny caterpillar as it moves defiantly toward him along a bamboo branch, wondering how it ever had the colossal nerve to get this close!

This intriguing new sculpture will be crafted in fine porcelain and completely painted by hand. So every color and detail will be clear, crisp and exact. The caterpillar's slinky green body and upturned head. The panda's black-rimmed eyes, perky ears, chubby feet—and that curious expression of puzzlement on his face!

Hi There! will be crafted for the World Wildlife Fund, under the supervision of Franklin Porcelain. Each imported sculpture will be backmarked with the official "WWF" symbol.

You will enjoy displaying this charming little panda in your home and showing it to your friends. And you'll have the satisfaction of knowing it is created in a long-established tradition. For of all porcelain pieces collectors prize, figures of baby animals are among the most popular.

To reserve your sculpture, send the application at right to the World Wildlife Fund, c/o Franklin Porcelain, Franklin Center, PA 19091, by September 15, 1986.

ALICE'S FORGOTTEN ILLUSTRATOR

A new edition of "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" features rarely seen and almost forgotten illustrations by David S. Hall.

Hall worked on Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" (1937). Two years later he began producing paintings for Walt's proposed animated version of "Alice in Wonderland."

The film, however, was shelved. Hall left Disney in 1940 and his illustrations were filed away. When "Alice" finally went into production in 1948, Hall's pictures were not used. Their recent "rediscovery" after years of virtual oblivion places Hall among the foremost illustrators of one of the world's most famous stories.

The book will be published this fall in the U.K. by Justin Knowles Publishing Group and in the United States next spring by Simon & Schuster. ♡

PETER SCOLARI: Vaudeville & The Young Actor

Actor Peter Scolari not only hosts The Disney Channel's "The New Vaudevillians," but he also juggles and rides a unicycle during the course of the special. Scolari, a regular on the CBS series "Newhart," first took up juggling and street performance — an important aspect of the "new vaudeville" — seven years ago. He maintains it contributed to his growth as an actor.

"I was in a play in New York," Scolari recalls. "One night another actor began juggling. I couldn't believe what I'd been missing. When I took up juggling, I discovered a quality in myself that I'd been searching for."

"The beauty of street performance is its throwaway character," Scolari adds. "It's always fresh and spontaneous. You have to generate this vibe, this current, between you and the audience. Then you have to keep that going. When you look at the nature of physical performance, vaudeville and street performing are its essence."

Of course in vaudeville and street performance, that immediacy presents its own problems. One has to cope with mistakes, hecklers — and failure. All of which comes as no surprise to Scolari.

"When I first came onto the street to perform I failed — and failed beautifully," Scolari chortles. "It was wonderful. I had this image of myself as a hotshot actor. Then came this failure. It was very humbling — and it shaped me as an actor. ♡"

LOUIS L'AMOUR: At Home On The Range

He has written 95 books (his latest, "The Last of the Breed," appeared earlier this summer), received both the Congressional Gold Medal and the Presidential Medal of Freedom (the only American so honored), and is the world's best-selling living author.

He is Louis L'Amour, and his work is familiar to subscribers of The Disney Channel. "The Cherokee Trail," adapted from L'Amour's novel of the same title, is an exclusive special which premieres August 8. It inspired the popular series "Five Mile Creek," which encores on The Disney Channel in September. Another L'Amour tale, "Down the Long Hills," is currently in production as a Disney made-for-television movie, starring Bruce Boxleitner.

"I wrote those two books at a time when the West was very much in my mind," L'Amour says. "Of course, I'm known primarily as a writer of Westerns, but I've written books with many other settings as well. As a writer, the whole world is my province."

L'Amour was born in Jamestown, North Dakota, at a time of change in the West. The frontier had passed on, yet "civilization" had not quite settled into the Great Plains. As one of six children, he grew up on accounts of cowboys and Indians.

"My great-grandfather was scalped by the Sioux," he explains. "And my grandfather fought against them. Of course, I left home at 15, but I've lived all over the West, in the wild country. I have a very strong sense of place — and how place, particularly the West, its vast loneliness, can shape character." ♡
